

More Fallout from Richfield S-x Ed Curriculum Minnesota Education & Health Departments Endorse

October 11, 2021

Last month, informed and concerned parents exposed a sexually explicit and morally bankrupt sex ed curriculum during a Richfield, Minnesota school board meeting. Called the 3R's; "Rights, Respect and Responsibility," the harmless sounding title "deliberately" deceives parents, as one testifier charged. Parents read the role playing scenarios directly from the curriculum teaching kids how to "consent" to sex. The lesson plans were so shocking, mainstream media like the Washington Examiner and the Fox News Network headlined the story across the country. Now the Richfield School District is scrambling to dissociate itself from its own program.

Testifiers revealed that subjects such as oral and anal sex are normalized at an early age. Diverse gender identities are promoted, and children are taught they have a 'right' to sexual pleasure.

The news article, "Sex-ed curriculum used in Richfield schools asks students to role play gay sex scenarios," stated:

These scenarios ask students to pair up, pretend they are in gay or lesbian relationships and navigate the process of deciding whether or not to have sex... Another of these scenarios has students pretend they are transgender and "make a decision" about having sex with a woman.

This lesson plan includes a note for teachers that explains how straight boys might "have a homophobic response" to being asked to engage in gay role playing.

Richfield District Runs Away from 3Rs

The national exposure put the district on the defensive and now they are trying to back away. "We only use a few select lessons from this program—not the entire curriculum," insists the unsigned statement, Teaching Students about Sexual Health in RPS District News, posted on the district's website.

"At the secondary level, we do not use the 3Rs," the statement argues. "Our secondary health teachers use two to three lessons from Positive Prevention PLUS, which is an evidence-based curriculum that is aligned with the National Sex Education Standards."

Not true, states the mom whom the superintendent invited to review their sex ed curriculum. She was specifically told that the Advocates for Youth 3Rs curriculum was "used in all their schools ... No other curriculum was offered for review," (A reviewer's Response to Richfield School District).

"I am deeply troubled by the school's denial of the curriculum they told me they used," said the mom who had thoroughly reviewed the very lesson plans they claimed they were teaching. "Either they lied to me then or they are lying now, or they have made a sudden change to their curriculum."

Further, to say that the Richfield curriculum is aligned with the National Sex Education Standards confirms where they are getting their resources. The National Sex Ed standards are created by

Advocates for Youth, along with SIECUS (Sexuality Information & Education Counsel of the US). SIECUS is the most notorious proponent of the explicit, offensive Comprehensive Sex Education (CSE) in the country. SIECUS calls itself “SIECUS: Sex Ed for Social Change.” They proudly announce that “SIECUS advances sex education as a vehicle for social change.” Between Advocates for Youth and SIECUS, they use Sex Ed to indoctrinate our youth with a highly politicized ideological agenda that incorporates the entire “Equity/CRT” worldview and focuses on training students to become political activists.

The National Sex Education Standards begin with a link to the Advocates for Youth website which in turn opens with a commitment to “social justice” activism. (“Social Justice” is the euphemism for “dismantling systems of oppression” in an irredeemably racist, sexist system. The “system” they are dismantling is our constitutional Republic.) The website reads:

Young people understand that reproductive and sexual health and rights are inextricably tied to social justice and the fight for liberation. Join thousands of youth activists and adult allies as we build a better and more equitable world.

The Advocates for Youth Activist Toolkit begins:

Young people are leading the movement for change. They are marching in the streets for equal rights. They’re walking out of classrooms for climate change. They’re standing up for people killed by guns. They are ending stigma around abortion. And they’re rewriting the script that tells us how to think, behave, and treat one another.

In other words, young people are organizing.

Both the Departments of Health and Education partnered to promote and train teachers in the 3Rs curriculum, essentially already implementing it in many Minnesota schools.

Health Education Training for Elementary, Middle and High School Teachers – March 11

The department's School Safety Technical Assistance Center is hosting a free, one-day training on Friday, March 11, for all educators who teach health and sexual health content. The training will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at TIES Training Center, 1667 Snelling Ave. N., St. Paul. Register for the training.

The training is for elementary school, middle school and high school teachers who teach lessons in content areas including: health, anatomy, puberty, gender, healthy friendships, identity, healthy relationships, teen social media use, and sexual health. The training is also for GSA advisors. Advocates for Youth will be leading the training, which will be offered in three tracks by elementary, middle and high school levels.

The training is for seasoned and new teachers alike, building on key skills in addressing new content areas for sexual health. The Advocates for Youth newly-released, free online curriculum, "Rights, Respect, Responsibility: A K-12 Sexuality Education Curriculum," will serve as a foundation for the training. The curriculum's authors Nora Gelperin, M.Ed., Elizabeth Schroeder, Ed.D., M.S.W and Eva S. Goldfarb, Ph.D. will deliver the training.

In an attempt to force CSE curriculum like 3Rs into all Minnesota schools, Richfield's state House member, Rep. Michael Howard, was one of 73 Democrat legislators who voted to mandate ALL Minnesota preK-12 public/charter schools to teach CSE. If passed, it would completely bypass the desires of local school boards and their local communities. The bill passed the House. If it had also passed the Senate, no school district today could opt out of CSE, because it would be a state mandate.

A CSE state mandate remains a high priority for Minnesota Democrats, because CSE reflects the political ideology of the Left.
